In the heart of the
Boyne Valley

Meath

Ireland's Heritage Capital

Welcome to Navan – Ireland's Floral Town

Just an hour from Dublin on the N3, Navan is a lively market town offering a wealth of attractions and activities. Suitable for both adult groups and families, there is something for everyone to enjoy. The Leisure Centre offers swimming pools, gym and an aqua slide. You can take a leisurely stroll through the medieval streets of Navan town or wander down to the Ramparts for a scenic river walk. If you want a sporting break, there is high quality golf, horse racing and fishing on the banks of the famous River Boyne, where it is alleged the Salmon of Knowledge was caught! Navan is a super shopping town, with many award winning shops. For evening entertainment, the numerous pubs and good food restaurants offer a warm, traditional welcome and 'ceol agus craic' to patrons. The new Meath Arts Centre provides a 320 seat theatre with café/bar facilities and state-of-the-art visual art galleries and exhibition spaces. For children and the young at heart there are play grounds and fun centres. Navan has proven to be an excellent location for filming with the recent documentary film 'Omagh' being filmed in the town.

Navan boasts several famous offspring such as Sir Francis Beaufort, a Royal Navy Admiral who formulated the Beaufort Scale of wind forces. Comedians such as

Parochial House, Navan

Poolboy Bridge, Navan

Hector O'Heochagain, Tommy Tiernan and Dylan Moran all hail from Navan and we have our own Hollywood celebrity, former James Bond, Pierce Brosnan. The poet John Boyle O'Reilly lived for a period in Academy Street. Short story writer and novelist Mary Lavin lived in Bective, near Bective Abbey.

The ancient Hill of Tara, formerly the 'Seat of the High Kings of Ireland' is now a National Monument. Tara is imbued with a magical, mythical atmosphere, breathing in the intoxicating air of a past that has inspired the present.

Slumbering in Tara's royal shadows are numerous historical, cultural and archaeological attractions such as: Bective Abbey, the second Cistercian Monastery founded in Ireland, Ardbraccan Church, the medieval seat of the Bishop of Meath and site of an early Christian monastery, the bell tower and ruins of Ardmulchan, a medieval church overlooking the River Boyne. The ringfort at Teltown was a prehistoric burial mound dating back to about 2000BC. Games in honour of the dead were held at Teltown in August each year, presided over by the King of Tara. Nearby is the early Christian monastic site of Skryne, called after the shrine of St. Colmcille's relics.

On the next page we have suggested an itinerary to help you enjoy your visit to Navan.

We hope you enjoy your stay.

Meath Arts Centre

The new theatre and arts centre occupies a pivotal site in the town of Navan. The 320 seat theatre provides a new space for the town where actors and audiences are brought together in a unique and intimate way. On the ground floor, a spacious fully-glazed foyer wraps itself around the new theatre, providing studio, exhibition and café/theatre-bar spaces, with continuous elevated views of the Fair Green and the town beyond. The second floor hosts state-of-the-art visual art galleries and exhibition spaces. The high standard of facilities provided and materials used makes this building a significant and exciting centre for the arts.

Hill of Tara

On the Hill of Tara Irish myth, legend and history meet. This magical site has been home to gods and goddesses, to druids and warriors, and Ireland's ancient High Kings ruled all of Ireland from this magical, mythical place. With panoramic views of the surrounding countryside, the Hill of Tara has a strange effect on people. From up here, not only can one see into the distance, but also into Tara's past. Tara has more than its share of heady stories to tell – tales of intoxicating drinks, chariot-driving High Kings and old hags who transformed themselves into beautiful women. Listen out for the Lia Fáil – singing stones that announce the presence of future kings.

Bective Abbey

Bective Abbey is the second Cistercian Monastery founded in Ireland. The medieval world of monks and abbeys bring to mind an ascetic life of isolation, prayer and scholarly study. This only tells part of the story. Irish Monasteries were often thriving and highly sought-out enclaves of cultural creativity – quite literally beacons in the dark, responsible for preserving and passing on precious texts and for the creation of some of the world's most imaginative and fanciful Christian art.

Dunmoe Castle

Symbolically etched in the ruins of Meath's castles are stories of lords and ladies, of battles and struggles, of power and glory. The draughty walls of these stony fortresses provided their Norman Lords with an important stronghold in a then hostile land. They were a place of refuge in times of danger and a strategic base from which to attack, conquer and rule. Today, these draughty old symbols of Norman military and political strength lend the Meath countryside an air of romantic fantasy.

Just 5 minutes walk from the centre of Navan town, the Ramparts boasts a splendid scenic walk along the banks of the River Boyne. It runs for at least 4 miles to the bridge over the Boyne at Stackallen. Across the river is Blackcastle House, built in the 1820s. No matter where you go in Meath, there seems to be magic, mystery or legend attached, perhaps that is why it is so aptly called the Heritage Capital of Ireland. For along the banks of the famous river Boyne, legend has it that the Salmon of Knowledge was caught. A fish renowned for its vast knowledge, and once eaten, knowledge and wisdom would pass directly on. You can continue the walk to Slane but, strollers beware, this is an 8 mile stretch.
